

CROSS-SECTORAL CONSULTATION ACCESS TO JUSTICE

What is the biggest problem facing the legal profession? The Chief Justice of Canada says it is access to justice. Research suggests that almost half of Canadian adults will experience a significant legal problem over a three year period, but very few will find legal services to deal with that problem. So why doesn't access to justice ("A2J") have a higher public profile?

Find out how and why this problem touches the lives of a majority of Canadians not just now, but throughout their lives. Learn about access to justice by joining the discussion at Green College.

ALL TALKS ARE HELD AT THE GREEN COLLEGE COACH HOUSE AND OPEN TO THE PUBLIC WITHOUT CHARGE
